RESEARCH INTERESTS

I have a passion for communicating science to the public and I'm deeply invested in a just transition to a renewable energy economy. I use my expertise as a climate scientist and ecosystem ecologist to help people understand the stakes of our changing climate and explain what we need to do at the individual, social, and political level to realize a better world than than our present one. In my academic career, my specialties include soil carbon and organic matter dynamics, fire effects on ecosystems, biomarker sourcing techniques, permafrost soils, and carbon market issues. The long-term goal for my career is to leave Earth, and its people, in better shape than when I entered it.
